Oct 9, 2016 A: Windows-1252 is the default code page for Windows. The "?" is ASCII 66 (on Windows). You may or may not be confused with the fact that you are seeing a question mark in your picture. However, it may be the result of some character encoding issue: Is your picture in an image file or from the web? Is the output encoding of your editor the same as the one in your picture? Are you using non-ASCII characters in your image or in the file path? This is a little bit tricky, since you don't say in your question exactly what you're trying to accomplish. However, we can probably guess. I'm going to assume you're trying to figure out what your file name is, since you didn't tell us that.

You're probably using a Windows-1252-encoded file name. To create a file name with a question mark character, one simply needs to prefix a copy of the character with a backslash. For example, the character's byte is 0x3F, and its Unicode code point is U+003F, but the character's name is?. Your file name should therefore be -?-name_of_your_file.jpg. The same is true for any other Unicode characters you might use in your file name. You should also note that the issue you're running into here isn't related to AutoCAD LT, but just AutoCAD.
